COLLABORATIVE/INNOVATIVE PROGRAMS
- College Now – Kingsborough is an acknowledged national leader in the development of collaborative programs, particularly with the New York City Department of Education (NYCDOE). The program pioneers the nationally acclaimed College Now, a transition to college program for moderate-achieving high school juniors and seniors. Funded by the City and State, Kingsborough’s College Now program serves 6,000 students in 35 high schools across New York City. Virtually all of these students enroll in a college upon graduation. Noting the program’s success, the City University expanded College Now throughout the City.
- The Leo M. Goldstein High School for the Sciences – Also in partnership with the NYCDOE, Kingsborough houses and provides support for this on-campus public high school.
- The Kingsborough Early College Secondary School (KCESS) – Part of the Early College Initiative of the City University of New York, KCESS is a 6th through 12th grade public school that offers its students the opportunity to take college courses at Kingsborough concurrently with their high school studies. Some earn their high school diploma and an associate’s degree at the same time.
- The Kingsborough Center for Economic and Workforce Development (CEWD) – CEWD’s mission is to provide New York’s under- and unemployed residents with the training and skills necessary to advance their careers or continue their educations. Through a series of initiatives in partnership with Kingsborough’s Office of Civicizing Education and the Department of Tourism and Hospitality, and other CUNY and non-CUNY partners, CEWD connects with local businesses to develop trainings that meet the needs of New York’s continually changing economy. Notably, Kingsborough, through CEWD, was the lead institution in a seven-college consortium that was awarded a three-year, $30 million dollar US Department of Labor Trade Adjustment Assistance Community College and Career Training (TAA/CCCT) grant.
- Current CEWD programs include:
  - CareerPATH, which provides career and college-focused occupational training, with integrated math skills instruction in culinary arts, food and beverage service/hospitality, and community health. Participants can earn industry-recognized credentials needed to find jobs, as well as translate their training into college credit and enter degree programs.
  - The RCC Urban Farm, an organic, year-round food production site providing students with urban farming expertise and first-hand experience building a more sustainable food system.

- Project Rise, a GED preparation program, enhanced with a comprehensive college and career readiness component that includes credit bearing academic courses linked to KCC’s Tourism and Hospitality department, employment placement assistance, and supportive counseling and guidance.
- Culinary Arts training offered in partnership with The Fortune Society, a non-profit whose mission is to support successful reentry into society for formerly incarcerated individuals.
- Northeast Resiliency Consortium, which will deliver career and college-focused occupational training for frontline workers in healthcare and foodservice occupations.

- My Turn, which offers students who have been dismissed from partnering colleges for academic reasons a second chance to succeed.

THE FACULTY
The college has a full-time faculty of 363, 82 percent of whom hold a doctorate or University equivalent. Adjunct faculty, drawn from throughout the New York City metropolitan region, number approximately 600. Professional staff and full-time and part-time support staff total 1,000.

THE STUDENTS
The college enrolls approximately 15,000 degree seeking students on campus. The student body is racially and ethnically diverse. More than half of Kingsborough’s students were born outside the U.S., representing 147 different countries and 73 different native languages. Sixty percent are the first generation in their families to attend college. Fifty-eight percent are full-time students, over one-fifth are 25 years old or older and more than 45% came from households with annual incomes of under $20,000. Half of the students work full-time or part-time while attending college, and one in five supports children. A broad array of student services permits all students to succeed to the maximum of their abilities.

Beyond their academic pursuits, Kingsborough students enjoy a wide range of co-curricular and extra-curricular activities. There are over 50 active student clubs and organizations and 10 intercollegiate athletic teams in which students participate.

FINANCES
The College’s 2012-2013 annual operating budget was $94.6 million, funded through the State of New York, the City of New York and tuition and fees. Tuition is $2,275 (excluding fees) per semester for full-time students who are residents of the City of New York. $280/credit for non-residents.

GOVERNANCE AND ADMINISTRATION
Faculty, students, and staff participate in the governance of the college. The governing body of Kingsborough is the College Council. With the president as its presiding officer, the 75-member council consists of the chairperson of each academic department, one additional elected faculty member from each department, faculty delegates at-large, twenty students, several college officers who serve on ex officio, two representatives of support staff, and one representative each of alumni and retired faculty.

In addition to the Office of the President, the other major administrative units of the college include the Provost’s Office/Academic Affairs, Student Affairs, Finance and Administration, College Advancement, Institutional Services, Enroll Management, and Continuing Education. The Professional Staff Congress/CUNY serves as the collective bargaining representative of the instructional staff.

KINGSBOROUGH COMMUNITY COLLEGE: ITS MISSION

Celebrating its 50th anniversary, Kingsborough Community College remains firmly committed to its stated mission of “providing both liberal arts and career education... [and] to promoting student learning and development as well as strengthening and serving its diverse community.” Kingsborough combines the best of what a college can offer. Its tranquil seaside location is a perfect setting for reflective academic pursuits, yet the college’s active engagement in the community provides students with exciting opportunities to become productive participants in a growing and vital borough.

Kingsborough was named one of the top four community colleges in the country by the Aspen Institute College Excellence Program in 2013. It has also earned national recognition for its creative and effective use of learning communities, for the large number of degrees it confers, for the high percentage of graduates who continue their studies, and for the innovative programs that draw thousands of non-traditional students to its campus every year.

A comprehensive two-year college, Kingsborough offers 38 associate degree and certificate programs in the liberal arts and sciences, and serves a widely diverse student population of approximately 15,000. It consistently ranks among the leading community colleges in the country in associate degrees awarded to minority students. Approximately 70% of Kingsborough’s students are enrolled in a liberal arts or science degree program, the rest pursue degrees in more specialized, career-oriented programs such as business, communications, culinary arts, nursing, journalism, maritime technology, tourism and hospitality, and the visual arts. It also maintains one of the most comprehensive adult and continuing education programs in New York City.

The college takes pride in its many support programs that enhance student success. All students are offered individual, personal and academic counseling; workshops to improve basic skills; and career planning and placement. Students enjoy the accessibility of Kingsborough faculty and administrators.

Kingsborough is a major presence in the bustling borough of Brooklyn and has partnered with dozens of schools borough-wide to create a seamless transition to college. Kingsborough also sponsors numerous activities year-round to meet the professional, recreational and cultural needs of the college community, including lectures, concerts, art exhibits and theater productions.

Located in the Manhattan Beach section of Brooklyn, and surrounded by three bodies of water—Sheephead Bay, Jamaica Bay, and the Atlantic Ocean—Kingsborough enjoys a spectacular oceanfront natural setting. Striking modern architecture has added to the natural beauty. Kingsborough boasts a number of special facilities on its 70-acre campus.
