The Chancellor and the CUNY School of Law seek a dynamic, visionary, influential leader to serve as the School’s next Dean. The position is available on or before July 1, 2006. Salary and benefits are competitive. The application of courtesy professors on the School’s Board of Trustees is encouraged for the position.

APPLICATIONS: Applicant should send to: Mr. Frederick Schaffer, Search Committee Chair, a letter expressing interest in the position, a CV, and three letters of reference. References for other candidate(s) must also be sent. Applications and support letters should be directed to the attention of the search committee.

DEGREE PROGRAM

The CUNY School of Law program, which leads to the Juris Doctor (J.D.) degree, is a professional legal education program designed to prepare students to practice law in New York State. It is a two-year program with a curriculum designed to provide students with a broad legal education that includes a strong foundation in legal methodology and doctrine, as well as an understanding of the underlying social, political, and economic forces that shape the practice of law.

The curriculum is divided into four parts: The first year provides a broad introduction to the law and the legal system; the second year focuses on the development of legal research and writing skills; the third year emphasizes advanced legal research and writing; and the fourth year is dedicated to the completion of the J.D. degree.

PROCEDURE FOR APPLICATION/ NOMINATION

The review of applications will begin on October 3, 2005 and will continue until the position is filled. Nominees should send a letter of nomination and, if possible, the nominee's curriculum vitae. Applications and nominations should be sent to:

CUNY School of Law Search Committee
The City University of New York
2000 Colden Street
New York, NY 10031

APPLICANTS

Applicants are encouraged to secure working relationships with faculty and other students.

FACULTY AND CAMPUSES

The CUNY School of Law at Queens College, founded in 1983, is one of the major law schools of the City University of New York. The School of Law is located on the Queens College campus in Flushing, New York. The School of Law is composed of three main components: the Law School, the Lawyering Seminar, and the Lawyering Seminar Program.

The Law School offers a full range of legal education programs, including courses in legal writing, research, and advocacy. The School is committed to providing a broad legal education that includes a strong foundation in legal methodology and doctrine, as well as an understanding of the underlying social, political, and economic forces that shape the practice of law.

The Lawyering Seminar Program offers a unique opportunity for students to develop their legal research and writing skills through real-world, hands-on experiences. The program is designed to provide students with the tools and skills they need to succeed in the legal profession.

The Lawyering Seminar Program includes a wide range of courses that focus on legal writing and research. The courses are designed to provide students with the skills they need to succeed in the legal profession, including: legal research and writing; legal analysis; and legal advocacy.

The School of Law is committed to providing a broad legal education that includes a strong foundation in legal methodology and doctrine, as well as an understanding of the underlying social, political, and economic forces that shape the practice of law.
The CUNY School of Law is one of the nation’s leading urban public law schools. Serving more than 800 undergraduate and 200 law students, the School prepares students for careers as practicing attorneys of excellence in a multi-cultural world. The students of the CUNY School of Law are unusually rich in their racial and gender composition. Women constitute 52% of the student body; they come from over 20 states, countries and territories of the world. The School’s comparatively modest tuition leaves most students with a low enough debt load to begin their careers without undue financial strain. For the class of 2004, the New York State Bar Exam pass rate was 68%. Although 85% of the students finance their education through loans, the large majority of them are able to handle both legal work and teach in graduate school. The clinics include: Battered Women’s Legal Assistance, the largest public interest law firm in Queens and located at the Law School. The third-year clinical offerings are offered through Main Street Legal Services, an urban law school that provides general legal services to individuals and community-based legal advocacy projects that provide direct client representation to people who could not otherwise obtain them. The clinics include: Battered Women’s Legal Assistance, the largest public interest law firm in Queens and located at the Law School. The third-year clinical offerings are offered through Main Street Legal Services, an urban law school that provides general legal services to individuals and community-based legal advocacy projects that provide direct client representation to people who could not otherwise obtain them. The clinics include: Battered Women’s Legal Assistance, the largest public interest law firm in Queens and located at the Law School. The third-year clinical offerings are offered through Main Street Legal Services, an urban law school that provides general legal services to individuals and community-based legal advocacy projects that provide direct client representation to people who could not otherwise obtain them. The clinics include: Battered Women’s Legal Assistance, the largest public interest law firm in Queens and located at the Law School. The third-year clinical offerings are offered through Main Street Legal Services, an urban law school that provides general legal services to individuals and community-based legal advocacy projects that provide direct client representation to people who could not otherwise obtain them.