CALL FOR PROPOSALS 2017-2018

CUNY FACULTY DIVERSITY INITIATIVE
| MELLON FOUNDATION

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The Faculty Diversity Career Enhancement Initiative (CFDI), funded by the Mellon Foundation, is a mentorship program for tenure-track junior faculty that includes monthly research/writing seminars and a series of professionalization workshops. By creating intellectual spaces to advance scholarship and creativity, we seek to enhance the prospects for tenure and promotion and improve upon the overall University climate.

The initiative invites applications from tenure-track junior faculty from the four MMUF-serving campuses; Brooklyn College, City College, Hunter College, and Queens College. Each cohort will work with a senior faculty mentor and participate in monthly writing workshops in order to advance a writing piece towards publication. Workshops will be organized throughout the fellowship with a focus on developing a book prospectus, grants and fellowships, demystifying tenure and promotion, as well as leadership development in higher education administration.

We are sensitive to the need for faculty to balance research, teaching, and public engagement. Opportunities for release time are available. However, this particular grant does not provide course release. Instead, we set the stage for faculty to become much more competitive for internal and external grants and fellowships in order to advance in their careers. To learn more about the program, please visit: <http://www1.cuny.edu/sites/cfdi/>

For the 2017-2018 academic year, faculty in the following disciplines are eligible:

Anthropology/ Sociology	History
Area/Cultural/Ethnic/Gender Studies	Literature
Art History	Musicology & Ethnomusicology
Classics	Performance Studies
English	Philosophy
Film, Cinema & Media Studies	Political Theory
Foreign Languages & Literatures	Religion & Theology
Geography & Population Studies	Theater

APPLICATION DEADLINE: FRIDAY, OCTOBER 6, 2017

ELIGIBILITY

The faculty member must:

- Be appointed at one of the four Mellon Mays Undergraduate Fellows (MMUF)-serving institutions: Brooklyn College, City College, Hunter College and Queens College,
- Be an untenured assistant professor hired on the tenure-track line,
- Be engaged in issues of diversity in their research,
- Have a doctorate or required terminal degree for teaching in their discipline (e.g., MFA for faculty in creative writing and/or film programs) and,
- Not hold a Faculty Fellowship Publication Program (FFPP) fellowship at the same time as the CFDI fellowship. You may apply to both but will not be eligible to participate in both. Early career faculty are especially encouraged to participate in the CFDI prior to the FFPP.

RESEARCH/WRITING SEMINARS

Questions of race, gender, ethnicity, and sexuality continue to undergird broad sections of inquiry in the academy and beyond. The ongoing legacies and current manifestations of inequality continue to demand intellectual analysis, institutional recognition, and collective intervention. The selected seminar themes should reflect the commitment of this faculty diversity initiative as well as scholarship that addresses diversity. Each cohort (8 faculty members on each campus), in collaboration with the faculty mentor, will develop a thematic focus in keeping with their own scholarship and research goals. These faculty-led workshops will provide scholarly feedback but also allow faculty to develop resources and networks that will be useful towards successfully achieving tenure and promotion.
